UNDERSTANDING THE ROLE OF THE SPONSORS-----

The World's 50 Best Restaurants does not rely on the sale of guides (the rankings are available to all on the website), nor on contributions, as it is not a label or a network, nor on affiliations (no reservation system). The World's 50 Best Restaurants has chosen financing through its partners, relying on 100% sponsorship. Although they are present at the award ceremonies and associated with the names of awards and occasional content campaigns, the sponsors have no impact on the vote. They are strictly excluded from the voting process, as attested by the Deloitte certification. Similarly, the countries that host award ceremonies, such as Australia in 2017, are partners of The World's 50 Best Restaurants. Their aim is to attract attention to the culinary traditions and expertise of their country, which they hope to introduce to the visiting chefs, media outlets, and specialised and qualified public. Sponsors have zero sway on results. In the face of controversy and questions from the media, the transparency of the voting system and the certification of its control are paramount to maintaining the integrity of The World's 50 Best Restaurants model.
